Materion Balzers Optics on its way to Jupiter

With the launch of ESA's JUICE (JUperiter ICy Moons Explorer) mission on April 14th 2023, coated optical components of Materion Balzers Optics have started their eight year journey to Jupiter. The mission was launched on board of an Ariane 5 rocket from Kourou (French-Guayana). Starting in 2031, the spacecraft shall study the three Jovian moons

Ganymed, Callisto, and Europa. The investigations are focused on water reservoirs, surface topography, properties of the ice crust, atmosphere, and magnetic fields. Eleven scientific instruments are on board to carry out the investigations. Materion Balzers Optics subsidiary in Jena has provided essential components for two of these instruments and the external monitoring camera. Learn more
